Are you sensitive enough to know the needs of other people, especially your family's and friends' needs? If your family or friends encounter problems, how could you know and help them? The best way is to listen to them and understand their problems. Just think about it, how do you feel and what would you do if you face the same problems. Besides, let them realize you really care about them, and their feelings are important to you. Don't just give them your opinions. You must support them and make them feel relieved.

Vending machines are machines that sell things, such as drinks. In foreign countries, you may find them everywhere when you walk down the street. Since they are easy to find and are always open, they are very popular with many foreign people. These machines sell almost anything. In Japan, vending machines sell beer, noodles, DVDs, and even rice rolls. Australia has vending machines that make French fries, and vending machines in Spain sell fishing equipment. We can’t know what strange things vending machines will sell in the future. But perhaps someday we would rely on them a lot.
