One day I was Cinderella all dressed up for the ball, another day Little Red Riding Hood, and still another day Wonder Woman or someone from another planet. Sometimes I was a bride or a princess, and other times I was a ballet dancer or a famous actress. I was an Indian woman in a sari, a South Sea Islander, and even once an Eskimo. I was anybody I wanted to be. Today, I can still remember the wonderful sense of escape that it gave me. All my childhood toys and games are long since gone, but somewhere in a box at the bottom of a closet, there is still three yards of gold-colored silk.
