Do you remember when you were twelve years old? It was a confusing time for me. When I was twelve, I had a very embarrassing experience. I went to the family barber, Mr. Willard, and he cut my hair very short. All my friends had long hair back then. That was the style. Mr. Willard didn't care much for style. I didn't want to be different, and I looked like a plucked chicken. I even missed a few days of school because of my embarrassment. My sister was amused. She told me not to be so disappointed. "After all," she said, "your hair will grow back." Still, to me it was very upsetting.
