Since the invention of the Internet, many people have predicted a paperless society. This prediction has come to reality as people use the Internet to read newspapers, send and receive e-mails, and access information. However, here are others who doubt that computer technology will ever lead to a paperless society.

People who see the coming of a paperless society believe that the Internet and e-mail will one day replace people's use of paper. Because the Internet allows people to read newspapers and access many databases online, they don't have to use paper to get needed information.
