There were many theological seminars around the world in the year 2000. The topics of discussion often centered on the meaning of Jesus coming to the world as a human being because He was born two thousand years ago. One afternoon, three cardinals got out of a seminary in New Jersey, USA. They just attended a symposium and were waiting for a taxi to get them back to a hotel in New York. The taxi arrived. The chauffeur was a young black man, who was very polite and with good driving skill.
