He gradually realized that he had done many wrong deeds. This troubled his conscience more and more. Therefore, he began to be concerned about the less fortunate people. There were many youngsters in his organization. He began to be interested in their families. Only then he discovered the families of those young people were not normal. He told his son that he stopped thinking about the past after he dissolved his organization. He eventually got peace of mind. His headaches were gone and he never had nightmares any more.
