1100809 高中職生 英翻中短文翻譯 題目

I have always enjoyed reading the novels written by Shusaku Endo, the world-famous Japanese author. The books he had written are easy to understand, without any overly difficult passages. Endo's last novel is titled "Deep River". The river referred to the Ganges in India. The story is about a group of Japanese tourists travelling to India. A lady of them, went there to look for her college classmate who she admired when they were in the college. She had heard that the man became a Catholic priest and left to serve in India. She then followed this trip and wanted to see that man again. However, she had a terribly difficult time finding him.
