Once I finished eating, I lay down on a bamboo bed for a nap. By the time I woke up, it was noon and the sunlight made it difficult for me to open my eyes. Seeing how simple and serene the village was, I longed to stay there a while longer. But then my thoughts turned to that boy with severe disease. I noticed there was a phone in the house. I wanted to borrow the phone and then I asked the old man in the house. But the old man refused me. He said their phone can only make calls within the village. Since the boy wasn't in the village, I couldn't reach him through phone calls.
