Although my boss is a blind man, he has taken each kind of transportation, including bus, train, airplane, etc. Besides, he doesn't need to ask for help from anyone. In his opinion, the so-called sympathy is actually a kind of discrimination. He said that in his country, the blind people never seek for sympathy. Unless it's necessary, they won't emphasize that they are blind or they need help. No wonder in their country, many blind people have achieved academic success.
