Eventually, I understood why the cook worker was angry at me. From her, I learned that I shouldn't bring the patient's cup anywhere in the kitchen. Anyway, I went back to give the bothersome patient the hot water. When he drank the hot water, he complained it was too hot. When I added cold water, he asked why there was no sugar. Luckily, I knew where the sugar was. After I added some sugar for him, he was finally satisfied. He even thanked me and called me a good boy. I was relieved as well.
