The designer told me that Master Huang advised everyone whom he met not to chat with Professor Lee. No one understood why he said so. I thought I must have been notorious now. Everyone had the impression that I talked too much. But I at least had passed the test of Master Huang and had kept my title of a good person.

Two hours ago, Master Huang called me to chat. As soon as I heard his voice, I knew that he called to find out how I was doing. This time, I did not talk for too long on purpose. I was testing you, Master Huang. I wanted to know whether you could feel the loneliness of an old man. Congratulations, you passed my test!

We, a teacher and a student, are both kind people.
