A desperate feeling emerged. I was sitting in a small, unfamiliar, and dark train station. All of a sudden, I did not know what to do. My energy seemed to be totally exhausted. I even had no energy to find something to eat or to find a lodging. But why were they still selling tickets? Why were so many people waiting on the platform for the trains? The more I thought, the more I found something strange. I was walking to the station exit. Then I decided not to give up and went back in.
