A daughter told her mother how her recent situation was awful. She failed in most courses in the final exam; her boyfriend who she had known for three years left her and chose her good friend; and the teacher who she respected and loved most died of illness. Her mother didn't say much more at her saddest moment; she just wanted to do something that made her daughter happy.

The mother said, "Let's make a cake." She took her daughter and walked into the kitchen together. When the mother prepared the cake-making utensils and raw materials, the girl stayed aside without saying a word.
