A young man rode his bicycle across Europe this summer, and, curiously, when he got hungry he ate leftovers. Baptiste, who is a 26-year-old Frenchman, went through trashcans to find leftovers while traveling from France to Poland. He did this in order to expose how much food people waste. Baptiste said that wasting food is "absurd and pointless," especially since many people are starving. On his 3,000-kilometer trip he scavenged behind supermarkets, bakeries, and restaurants, and found fresh vegetables, fruits, and bread dumped in trashcans.
