Mexican foods have a variety of flavors and food choices with a delightful blend of sourness, spiciness, and sweetness. Take one of the most famous Mexican street foods as an example, tacos usually have meat, vegetables, cheese, and some spicy or sour sauce wrapped in a soft tortilla or crispy fried corn tortilla.

Just like tacos, burritos are usually filled with a type of meat - like beef, chicken, or pork - and other ingredients like rice, cooked beans, lettuce, tomatoes, salsa sauce, or guacamole sauce in a larger tortilla. Since they are larger than tacos, burritos are usually viewed as a real meal, not a snack.
